“Who you see is who I am, and what you see is what you get!” How many of us can say these words and mean it? Too many people hide behind masks of pretense, whether it is socially, emotionally, spiritually, or physically simply to gain the approval or acceptance of others. One of the greatest challenges many people face today, especially Christians, is trying to live an authentic (unbogus) life in a world full of fake (bogus) people. Thus, this book is a real eye-opener on the subject of bogusness versus unbogusness. The author gives valuable insight into how to avoid living a bogus life and how to pursue an unbogus life. Having your outer man match your inner man is the goal of this book. This powerfully written book will also challenge you to rise above your unbogus behavior and find true contentment, peace, and self-worth. Finally, this book will give you a game plan to cast out areas of unbogusness in your life that have kept you from living your best life. A microprocessor-based automated display system for the Rotating Beam Ceilometer (RBC) was developed to demonstrate the feasibility of modernizing and improving the present display system. The new system consists of a Burroughs self-scan panel display (model number SSD0124-0039) and an Intel 8080A-based microcomputer. The program acquires the signal returns from the RBC, converts the analog signal to a digital value, and displays the most recent scan. The system allows for three modes of operation or processing. Two modes, a one-scan mode and a five-scan mode, require no further inputs from the user once they have been selected. A manual mode which is user-interactive is also available. The basic display capabilities consist of a depiction of signal intensity vs. height, a numerical display of the height of the peak value and an illuminated cursor positioned at the peak value. Evaluation of the system at AFGL and Scott AFB, IL has confirmed that the display is more readable, provides more accurate cloud heights and permits better interpretation of the data obtained than does the current CRT display system. Further considerations which will be incorporated before operational implementation are discussed. (Author). The Haidao Suanjing or Sea Island Mathematical Manual, is one of the "Ten Classics" of traditional Chinese mathematics, and its contents demonstrate the high standards of theoretical and mathematical sophistication present in early Chinese surveying theory. The Haidao composed in A.D. 263 by Liu Hui, established the mathematical procedures for much of East Asian surveying activity for the next one thousand years. The contents of the Haidao also testify to the ability of the Chinese to systematize mathematics and hint at the use of proof in Chinese mathematics, a concept usually associated with Greek mathematical thought. Frank Swetz provides an annotated translation of the Haidao and an analysis of its surveying problems. In particular, he details surveying techniques and undertakes a mathematical exposition of the Chinese chong cha solution procedures. The Haidao is a testimony to the ingenuity and skill of China's early surveyors and its author, Liu Hui. This study complements and extends the findings of Swetz's previous book, Was Pythagoras Chinese? An Examination of Right Triangle Theory in Ancient China. The author discusses his career and shares stories about a faster-than-light spaceship, the afterlife, mass amnesia, and a crowded world where people live only one day a week. Presbyterian seminary libraries are those of Austin, Columbia, Louisville, Princeton, Reformed, and Union (Virginia); included also are the libraries of the Historical Foundation of the Presbyterian and Reformed Churches and the Presbyterian Historical Society. An examination of this listing of published (i.e., printed) books, parts of books, pamphlets, and periodical article reprints shows that PCUS ministers became authors, editors, translators, poets, dramatists, composers, and essayists who wrote sermons, polemics, commentaries, Bible studies, theologies, histories, and letters to Presidents.
